

I ask that the law remain as stringent as possible. If I have left a business then I was probably not happy with something regarding their company. If that company would have been more concerned with customer service before I quit then it would be a none issue. Having them bother me at home, on my time after the fact is annoying and invasive. It is dictated what I can hear on the radio which is something I chose to tune into. Businesses calling my home is something I wish I could choose for them not to do.

Sincerely,

Shawn V. Michler